By TAMARA GRIPPI

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 11 will be a big day for fire safety education as both the Carmel-by-the-Sea Fire Department and the Cypress Fire Protection District will be holding their annual open houses. The Carmel open house will take place between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. at the fire department on Sixth Avenue between Mission and San Carlos. Visitors are invited to tour the station, watch a demonstration of the new rescue truck and eat a free barbecued hot dog. The fire fighters will also provide activities for children, including a little house set up so the kids can pretend they're putting out a fire.

The Cypress Fire Protection District's open house will be held at the Rio Road Fire Station, at 3775 Rio Road between the Crossroads and Barnyard

MAGNIFICENT MOLA MOLA HEADING FOR HOME HOME

By KIRSTIE WILDE

THE MOLA mola lumbering through the 3-story aquarium is stupendous. At 7-feet tall and 600 pounds, it looks something like a lumpy white cloud with fins.

The huge fish has grown 10 times the size it was when Monterey Bay Aquarium biologists introduced it to the sharks, turtles and tuna fish in the Outer See MOLA MOLA page 6A

Aquarist Tim Cooke at the Monterey Bay Aquarium has taught the giant sunfish to come to a yellow star 'target' that is lowered into the water on the end of a pole. It knows that right after it sees the target, a hand bearing several nice globs of pureed seafood will appear.

Supervisors OK time share plan for Highlands Inn

By PAUL MILLER

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors gave a unanimous thumbs-up this week to a plan to convert the Highlands Inn into a time share operation. The plan — hotly opposed by some residents of the Highlands — was approved on the strength of an environmental impact report that said the conversion would actually benefit the environment in several key areas.

Council glum over gallery glut

By TAMARA GRIPPI

AFTER HEARING from gallery owners and residents who are worried that the number of art galleries in town has gotten out of hand, the Carmel City Council called for a study to decide whether the city should set a limit on galleries.

At the council's October 7 meeting, members voted unanimously to have the Carmel Planning Commission determine whether such a limit should be established. That limit could potentially be set lower than the current number of 88 galleries in town.

Some council members argued that the "proliferation" of art galleries is something that's all too visible to locals.

"I've had an increasing number of comments from residents and business people who say, 'aren't we going a little far in the numbers of art galleries we're approving?'" said Carmel Mayor Ken White.

In the last 25 years, the number of galleries has increased by 60 percent, according to a study done by the Carmel Planning staff. Back in 1973, the city had 55 galleries.

Sales honored at city council meeting

By TAMARA GRIPPI

PRESERVATION activist Enid Sales, who is suing the Carmel City Council over demolitions of what she calls "vintage homes" in Carmel, was lauded by Mayor Ken White October 6 and honored with a certificate of appreciation for her many years of service on the Historic Preservation Committee.

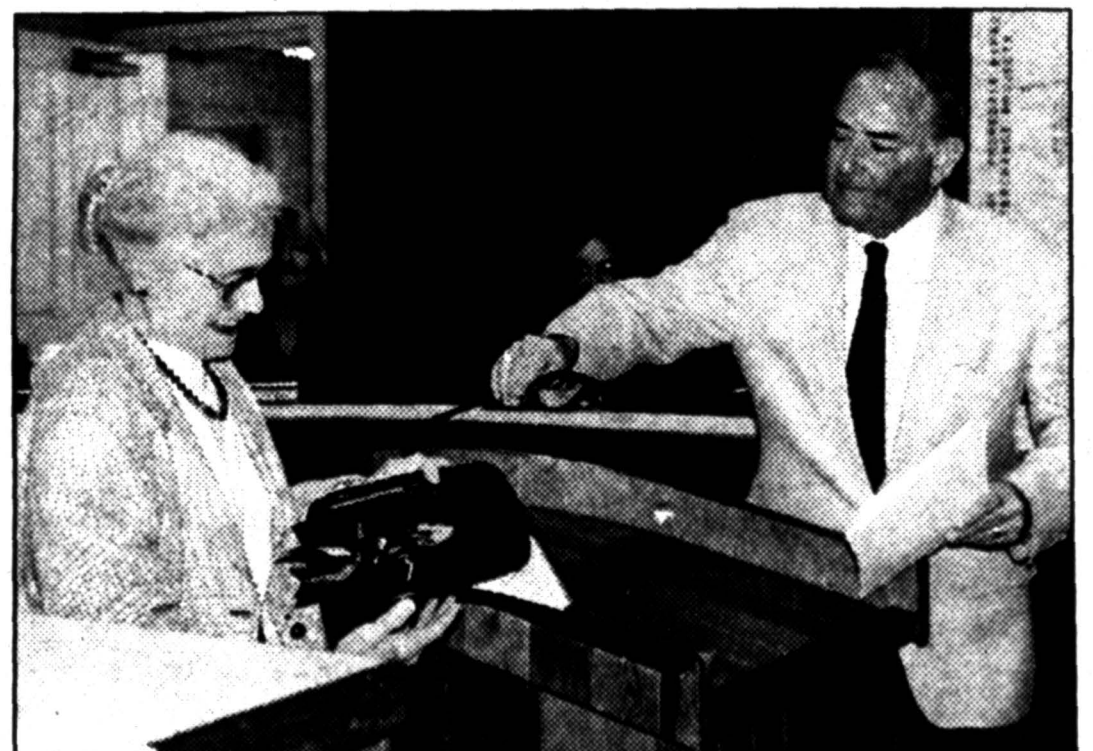

White praised Sales for "fighting tooth and nail" to preserve Carmel's historic character. All members of the city council applauded Sales and stood up to shake her hand as she received the certificate and a black Couroc tray with the city's seal designed in gold.

Sales' fellow preservation committee member Anne Bell came forward and presented her with a bouquet of flowers.

Sales said she appreciated the chance to serve Carmel and urged the city to convert the historic preservation committee into a full-fledged commission.

"This is certainly the time... to initiate a strong effort to preserve the very special architectural char-

Late night burglary thwarted

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A CARMEL bakery employee who entered the shop at 11 p.m. October 4 interrupted a burglar who was apparently looking for more than a late night snack.

The woman came into the bakery at 10:55 p.m. Sunday night to secure the day's receipts when she noticed that someone was lurking behind the counter.

Startled, the woman ran out the front door of the store onto Ocean Avenue. When the intruder realized that he had been discovered, he reportedly ran out after her and fled toward Dolores Street, according to Carmel Detective Sgt. Pete Poitras.

The man most likely gained entry to the bakery by prying open the back door.

"It looked like he was in the process of prying open the cash drawer when he realized someone had entered the place," Poitras said.

The man is described as a white male, 19 to 25 years old, 5 feet 8 inches to 6 feet tall, 160 pounds with close cut brown hair. He was last seen wearing a darkly colored sweatshirt with a hood covering his head.

Nothing was taken during the attempted burglary and police are continuing to investigate the case.

Rancho Cañada puts back what the river took away

By PAUL MILLER

A COLOSSAL earth-moving project is underway just off Carmel Valley Road — a project which will bring back to life the 12th hole of the Rancho Cañada East Golf Course.

About 75% of the 485-yard par-5 hole was washed into the Pacific Ocean by the raging Carmel River last February.

"Devastating was the word for it," says Don Boston, Executive Vice President of Rancho Cañada.

The river flooded half of Rancho Cañada's 36 holes the morning of February 3rd, covering much of the scenic course with a thick layer of silt.

But even after the flood waters receded, the river — carrying a record amount of rain — continued its assault on Rancho Cañada.

"It started eating away at the 12th fairway that morning," Boston recalls ruefully, "and it didn't stop until the end of March."

By then, nearly all of the 12th hole was gone. In its place was a giant, 15-foot deep, rock-strewn canyon.

"The loss was severe and there was no doubt that we had a tremendous challenge ahead of us to recover, somehow," owner Nick Lombardo says.

Without "a single penny of insurance" to cover the terrible storm damage to the beautiful courses he built 28 years ago, Lombardo says his biggest concerns were, "Where are we going to get the money, and where are we going to get the dirt?"

Seven days

to save the greens

Lombardo had to devise a number of strategies to deal with his first problem — money.

"We were completely shut down for 33 days," he says, "so we had to confront an inescapable, severe loss of business in addition to the cost of repairing all that damage."

The total bill would reach about $3.5 million, Lombardo says. "I exhausted my cash reserves and took loans from employees, friends, business partners and some of our local banks."

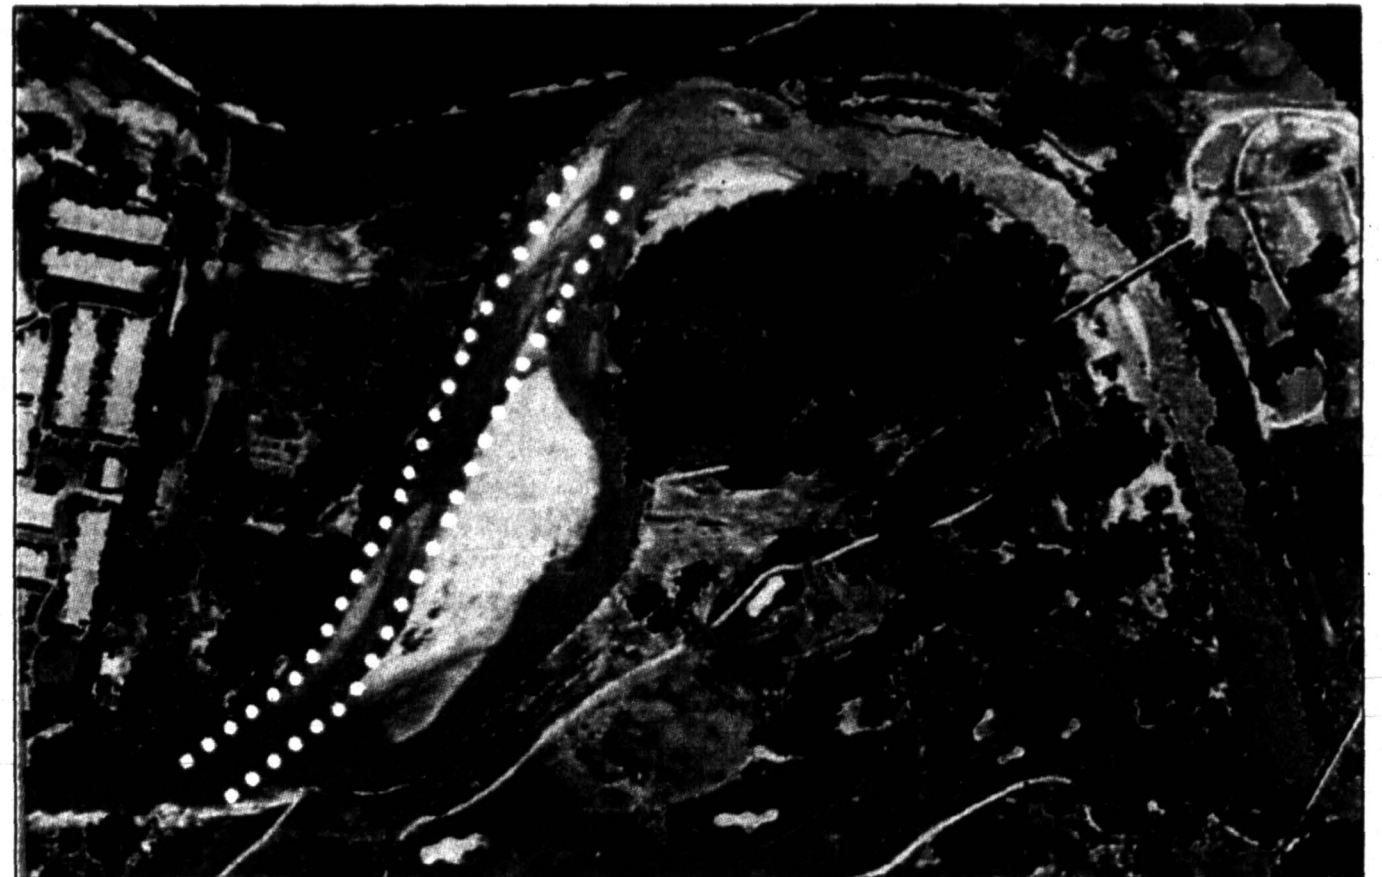

Also, many of the club's vendors and suppliers were willing to be paid on a delayed schedule, Lombardo says. "We just kept putting one foot in front of the other," he says.

About "98 percent" of the club's members renewed their annual member-

This aerial photo, taken on March 30, 1998, clearly shows how the Carmel River left its usual channel (white dotted lines) and invaded the 12th fairway of the Rancho Cañada East Course during last February's record-breaking rains.

A big earthmoving project to restore the former riverbank is now underway — after eight different government agencies approved the work.

City unilaterally puts contract into effect

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL City Council adopted its "last, best and final" contract offer for city employees at its October 6 meeting.

The council put the contract in place, but leaders of the city employee associations told The Pine Cone that they won't sign it.

However, the city has the ability to impose its final offer without those signatures.

The offer puts into effect a 3.25 percent salary increase. While both sides agreed on that raise for the 1998-1999 fiscal year, they have not been able to resolve how salary increases should be calculated in the future.

Members of the four employee associations want the city to continue using a 10-city comparison study and the San Francisco Bay Area consumer price index as guides for increases. The city has used both of those guides in the past.

City Administrator Jere Kersnar said that the city no longer wants to be locked into any one method of determining future raises.

Negotiations, which have been going on since early this year, broke down August 4 when the employee associations declared an impasse.

A state mediator met with representatives from the city and the employee associations twice, but the two groups couldn't reach an agreement.

The city's final offer makes no mention of future salary increases. (Earlier versions of the city's offers stated that increases would be based on a variety of factors, including the surveys and the city's financial status.)

The 3.25 percent salary increases — which are retroactive to July 1 — will be paid to the employees in a lump sum, according to Kersnar.

At the Tuesday meeting, council members adopted the new contract as one of the various items on its "consent calendar" — subjects not scheduled for discussion.

While no one on the council raised the issue at the public meeting, they discussed it behind closed doors beforehand.

Several days before the public meeting, the council issued the following statement about its upcoming vote:

"In reviewing the associations' latest proposal, the council does not feel that future discussions toward agreement will be productive."

Employee association leaders called the council's action a "huge disappointment."

The employee groups are planning to focus their efforts on next years negotiations, according to spokesman Chuck August.

recused himself from participating in deliberations about the time share plan because in 1986 he had received a campaign contribution from the inn's owners — stayed on the dais for Tuesday's hearing after explaining that more than a year had passed since the contribution had been made.

Just before the final vote to approve the plan, Potter, who is chair of the board, elicited a major concession from representatives of the Pritzker family of Chicago which owns the Highlands Inn as well as the Hyatt Hotels chain.

The Planning Commission had attached a condition to its approval of the project that 10 percent of the inn's rooms would not be sold and would continue to be available as regular hotel rooms.

"Would you be willing to increase that to 25 percent?" Potter asked Anthony Lombardo, an attorney for the time share project, and Mark Solit, who represented the Pritzkers.

At first Lombardo seemed taken aback by the request. But after a few comments apparently designed to explain why such a substantial hold-back was not necessary, Lombardo agreed to Potter's request.

That major reduction in the scope of the time share conversion would seem to ameliorate many of the objections raised by project opponents, who insisted that time-sharing would increase occupancy of the hotel significantly.

Bernie Egerter, who lives near the hotel, claimed that the number of people staying at the hotel would increase "66 percent" as a result of time sharing. "Common sense dictates that the increase in occupancy will far outstrip the infrastructure," Egerter told the board.

At least 30 members of the audience seemed to agree with Egerter that increased use of the hotel would make the Highlands' dreadful traffic situation worse and would increase water use at the inn and also generate more sewage.

But their opinions were swamped by the EIR's unequivocal conclusion that, thanks to more parking spaces, sewage plant improvements and various water-saving measures, none of those impacts would occur.

"I can't stand up here and deal in rumors," Lombardo said. "I have to deal in facts, and those facts are found in the EIR and the studies that support it," he said.

"The time share project is the environmentally superior alternative," one of the consultants who prepared the EIR told the board.

The audience in the crowded supervisors' chambers also included at least 50 people who showed up to support the time share plan.

"We should be thankful that such a quality company [Hyatt] came in and rescued the Highlands Inn when it was bankrupt," Highlands resident John Neidel said.

Before voting, Potter listed several advantages of the conversion, including $200,000 in hotel tax money that will go straight to the Carmel Highlands fire department, and said that the EIR's analysis made him "comfortable" with his vote in favor of the plan.

Supervisor Tom Perkins chided time share opponents for failing to raise any substantial suggestions for ways to lessen the impact of time sharing on their neighborhood.

"I've heard a lot about the EIR being inadequate but I haven't heard any suggestions for permit conditions," he said.

Opponents of converting the Highlands Inn to a time share operation can appeal the board's decision to the California Coastal Commission.

But sources familiar with the coastal commission said that without opposition from Dave Potter, who is the Monterey County government representative on the state coastal body, there is practically no chance the commission will reject the time share plan.

Sale of the time share units will probably begin in the year 2000, Solit said.

MOLA MOLA

Bay exhibit just one year ago. And within the next few weeks, they will bid the giant sunfish good-bye.

It's not that the Mola mola (from the Latin "millstone") has outgrown its million-gallon tank. The problem is the great fish's potential: It could grow to eight times its present size, or 4,000 pounds, and then it would be impossible to get the behemoth out of the tank.

According to aquarium spokesman Ken Peterson, "We don't want it to get much larger because there is a limit on how big we can handle. It will be a challenge, even at this size, to muscle the Mola mola into the sling. The biologists want to make sure it doesn't injure itself and doesn't injure them."

Normally, the fish sling used to remove a specimen from the aquarium's outer bay tank would be lifted by an I-beam and block-and-tackle contraption, then lowered into an oxygenated holding tank until the whole tank could be moved to a research ship. A typical fish being released would then be taken out to sea, where divers would lower it into the deep blue.

But this Mola mola already exceeds the capacity of the research boat. It has grown so fast on a hand-fed diet of shrimp and pureed seafood ("kind of like uncooked gefilte fish," according to Peterson) that the aquarium plans to charter a helicopter to airlift it out of the tank and fly it to its ocean release site within the next few weeks.

Peterson says the Federal Aviation Administration will restrict airspace during the operation, and keep all spectators away: "They don't want a quarter-ton fish landing on somebody's head."

Indian summer at sea

The biologists at the aquarium say that making the move while the water is still "warm" will help keep the sunfish as stress-free as possible. The temperature of the Outer Bay exhibit is 68 degrees, about the same as the ocean 20-30 miles off shore, according to Peterson. The sunfish, which subsists on jellyfish in the wild, will be tagged but not monitored when it is released.

Your last chance to get a close-up glimpse of this weird, seldom-seen leviathan will last only a short time longer. The giant sunfish will be released before Thanksgiving, replaced by one "maybe 50 pounds or smaller," according to Peterson.

He's learned they grow rather rapidly.

GALLERIES

However, Carmel Planning Director Brian Roseth — who recommended against the city considering a cap for galleries — explained that compared with the overall growth in Carmel, galleries have only increased 2.7 percent.

"Caps bring their own problems," Roseth noted in his report. Such drawbacks include monopoly control, high rents that could force out the single-artist type of gallery, impairment of business mobility and pressure to increase gallery size, according to Roseth.

A block of galleries

But council members said they were disturbed by a trend that seemed to continually replace one-of-a-kind shops with galleries.

Carmel resident Linda Anderson said, "I'm one of those residents who walks around and every time a store goes out of business, I say 'it's going to be an art gallery.' And it almost always is."

Donald Craghead, owner of D.E. Craghead Fine Art Gallery on Sixth St. between Dolores and Lincoln said that within the last year and a half, his two neighbor shops — Harriet Duncan's women's apparel shop and Hansel and Gretel Candy Shop — have been replaced by art galleries.

"Now the entire block with the exception of Little Swiss Cafe is composed of art galleries," Craghead said at the meeting. "Carmel is quickly losing the diversity that has made it a viable place to conduct business and a desirable place to live."

Craghead presented a letter to the council signed by 14 gallery owners and representatives urging the city to reduce the number of galleries allowed in town.

"We need to watch carefully and be very vigilant to be sure that we don't lose these diverse shops," White said. "As these spaces go to art galleries, the uses are lost."

The owners of the Hansel and Gretel Shop told The Pine Cone that they had to close because their business didn't receive enough support in town.

Coming and going

Carmel City Councilwoman Paula Hazdovac said that she's witnessed firsthand the high turnover rate of downtown galleries.

"In the courtyard I'm in, I've seen so many art galleries come and go," Hazdovac said. "There have been businesses there that have literally sold nothing in a year."

"How many of these businesses are false storefronts, writeoffs for big corporations?" Hazdovac asked. "How much revenue is the city losing?"

Hazdovac and other council members pointed out that galleries, unlike antique stores, can be approved 'over the counter' at the planning department, instead of going before the planning commission.

Carmel currently has limits — set by Measure H, the commercial rezoning proposal passed by voters in 1993 — for souvenir stores (10), jeweler stores (32) and restaurants facing Ocean Avenue (15).

acter of Carmel," Sales said.

Meanwhile, Carmel City Attorney Don Freeman is preparing his response to the lawsuit filed by Sales and members of a group called Friends of Carmel Cultural Heritage (not to be confused with the Carmel Heritage Society — see letter to the editor on page 14A).

Sales' lawsuit charges the council with "engaging in an unlawful pattern" of allowing demolitions of vintage homes without requiring an environmental impact report for each one.

The suit specifically targets the permission to allow the Donati family of Carmel to demolish a 1920s-era house on San Antonio Avenue near Twelfth to make room for a new home.

Sales has served the city for the past 10 years, ever since she was a member of the first ad hoc preservation committee.

Despite the recent controversy, at the city council meeting, Sales appeared to be delighted with the gift she received from the city.

"I was really genuinely surprised that they made that nice gesture," Sales said.

Tree's company

"I THINK that I shall never see a poem lovely as a tree." With apologies to Joyce Kilmer, perhaps the poem should read:

"I think that I shall never see A permit lovely as a tree."

My heart goes out to Carmel homeowner Sherrie Gallo whose request to remove an oak tree was granted by the city's Forest and Beach Commission, but only on condition that she turn over her first-born child to the authorities.

Okay, maybe that's a bit of exaggeration, but she was told she must re-landscape her entire front yard, remove her drip irrigation system and plant a new tree. All of this at considerable expense.

The oak in question, thriving from last winter's rains, had grown to within a half inch of Ms. Gallo's bay window, threatening to move right in with her with this year's expected growth.

I read the story with the usual disbelief that I feel when this tiny town throws its considerable weight around. It reminded me that sometimes being very small in stature can cause people (and cities?) to become bullies.

"Boy," I thought, "I'm so glad I live a block outside the city limits. I don't have to deal with this nonsense," and I proceeded with plans to trim two of my Monterey pines and remove one that was definitely infected with the dreaded pitch canker.

I called around for some estimates on the work. Two firms came out and told me the two big trees were healthy, and all that was needed was removal of dead limbs. The other tree, no more than 12 years old and 30 feet in height — a veritable youngster by tree standards — could NOT be removed until I got permission from the county; it's a protected species.

"But it's dying," I said.

"You still need a permit."

Red tape

I phoned the county and, sorry to say, hung up with "bureaucratess" ringing in

Monterey pine pitch canker to be topic of community meeting

THE EFFECTS of pitch canker on Monterey pines and the need for planning to limit its spread will be discussed at a public meeting from 3 to 5 p.m. on Oct. 20 in Carpenter Hall at Sunset Center.

The workshop will lay out the extent of the deadly fungus on Monterey pines and discuss conservation options for the forests and concerns about transportation and disposal of infected cuttings.

my ears. Enough red tape to wrap every Christmas present I'll buy this year.

I phoned Hugh Smith, local tree "guru," who clarified what the county employee had been trying to say:

The tree must be examined. It must be pronounced dead with a written report from a county-approved authority. The cost of only the paper work would be $100. If the tree was not yet dead, it could NOT be removed.

Incredulous, I asked what seemed to me a sensible question: "But if it's DYING, can't I have it cut down?"

"No."

Looking out the window at the two 60-footers whose basic pruning needs had been estimated at $1,000, I asked: "Will a tree continue to grow if it's diseased?"

"Yes," said Mr. Smith.

So how's this for logic? I have a tree that is sure to die, but will continue to get much taller (and much browner) before it expires. I cannot get permission to remove it until it gasps its last and is pronounced dead by a tree "doctor." When that day comes, it might well be 60 feet tall, and cost considerably more to remove than it would now when it's small.

Ironically, the tree in question was just a volunteer sprout when we bought the house. I watched and encouraged its growth to the extent that some might even call me a "tree-hugger."

Perhaps the powers-that-be, those all-knowing protectors of the landscape, should consider this: Their rules may lead people to kill every little Monterey seedling that has the guts to poke its head through the soil.

As for me, I'll be that lady sitting in the garden, covered head to toe with brown pine needles, holding a $100 check in her hand.

Deer

The population and condition of the Blacktail and Mule Deer herds of California are at an all time low. The increased development of lands needed for migration or winter and summer feeding, poaching, depredation, and other factors are resulting in decreasing numbers of deer.

The yearly budgets of the State of California Department of Fish and Game, the federal Bureau of Land Management, the Department of Forestry, and the United States Park Service have been cut to unacceptable lows due to lack of funds.

The California Deer Association, a California 501 C3 non-profit Association was founded in 1996 to help solve this problem.

The C.D.A. formed a statewide Habitat Committee made up of members, state and federal agencies. The purpose of the Habitat Committee is to fund projects that will result in the continued improvement of the deer populations.

SACHS, Frances Ruth Maurina Langoe, 84, passed on peacefully 9/26/1998 at The Forum at Rancho San Antonio, where she had been living since 1995. Youngest daughter of a Norwegian immigrant family, she was born (3/15/1914) and raised in Portland, OR. In her late teens and early 20's she, her oldest sister, Constance Elizabeth Langoe, and two other friends formed a vocal quartet, which was quite popular in the Portland area. From 1937 to 1941, she was Executive Secretary to the Dean of the Medical School, University of Oregon, where she was much respected and loved by faculty, staff and students. There she met her future husband, a young, recently recruited, radiology faculty member, Maurice David Sachs, MD. After World War II, she, her husband, and infant son, David Peter Langoe Sachs, settled in Cleveland, OH, where she lived and made her home for the next 30 years. In 1976, she and her husband, Dr. Maurice D. Sachs, retired to their home, SeaDawn, in Carmel Highlands, CA. Throughout her life, in whatever community she lived, she immediately immersed herself in a wide range of community service activities. During the 1950s and 1960s, in her capacity as 1st Vice President of the Cleveland Chamber Music Society, she worked with George Szell, then Music Director of the world-renowned Cleveland Orchestra, and members of the Cleveland Orchestra to bring music into the curriculum of Cleveland's schools. The successful program, which she instituted there, subsequently became part of the nation-wide Young Audiences program. She also worked actively, along with her husband, to improve and foster better relations between Cleveland's African-American communities and whites. She actively and successfully fought 1950s real-estate agent tactics to create "white-flight." She worked closely with her husband throughout his long and successful medical career, writing and editing every one of his medical and scientific articles with him. Perhaps her single greatest attribute, though, was her unique capacity to bring true happiness, joy, and self-respect to each life she touched, no matter how briefly. She is survived by her son, David Peter Langoe Sachs, MD, her daughter-in-law, Bonnie L. Sachs, her grandson, Peter Trevor Leighton Sachs, all of Palo Alto, CA, her three nieces, Sandra Siegner and Connie Kiener, both of Portland, OR, and Sandra Wexler, of Pittsburgh, PA. She deeply treasured her friendships with these six family members. She is also survived by her cousins, Elmore Mostul of Oregon City, OR, and the Reverend Hillmar E. Mostul, of Eau Claire, WI, as well as numerous, close cousins in Norway and Sweden. Friends and relatives are invited to attend a memorial service for her and her late husband, Maurice David Sachs, MD, on Saturday, October 31, 1998, at 11:00 AM at the Unitarian Universalist Church of Palo Alto, 505 East Charleston Road, Palo Alto, CA, the Reverend Kenneth Collier presiding. Arrangements under the direction of the Los Altos Chapel of Spangler Mortuaries, 399 So. San Antonio Road, Los Altos, CA. # Carmel City Council throws its support behind Measure N

By TAMARA GRIPPI

THE CARMEL City Council voted to endorse Measure N — the one-half cent sales tax increase proposal to fund the Prunedale Bypass — at its meeting October 6.

Voting 4-1 with city councilwoman Barbara Livingston dissenting, members decided to support the ballot measure that is projected to raise $182 million over a nine-year period to fund the Highway 101 Bypass Project and other road improvements countywide.

"The 40 deaths over a period of time in that area is something we're never going to excuse," said Carmel Mayor Ken White, before voting with the majority.

The overall costs of the 7.4 mile four lane freeway intersecting Highway 101 with an interchange at Russell Road and Espinosa Road and an interchange near Echo Valley Road and Crazy Horse Road are projected to run at $205 million.

The California Transportation Commission has agreed to pay for everything except for $51 million, which will be funded by Measure N, according to Carol Lacy, the co-chair of the Measure N committee and a Monterey County Planning Commissioner.

However, the county's share is listed as $82 million on the ballot in order to account for inflation, Lacy said. The remaining monies — estimated at $100 million — will be split up among the 12 cities and the county itself.

Carmel is expected to receive $5.4 million for transportation and road safety improvements in the city.

Adding up

While the council endorsed the measure, several speakers at the meeting questioned why $182 million needed to be raised for only a $51 to $82 million share of the Prunedale costs.

Shirley Humann, speaking for the Carmel Residents Association, said, "We continue to be concerned about Measure N being the best solution and economically prudent plan . . . It still appears to us that the measure would generate funds far in excess of the needs."

Others were worried that the new bypass would "pave the driveway" for Rancho San Juan, a 3,000 house subdivision planned between North Salinas and Prunedale.

"I can't get over the image of unseen developers pulling the strings to fund the improvements so that they don't (have to pay)," Livingston said.

However, White pointed out that the Transportation Agency of Monterey County has set up an authority to ensure that Measure N's funds aren't used to pave new roads.

"As far as the San Juan project goes, I don't think we can avoid being close to a project these days," said city councilman Marshall Hydorn, who is the city's representative on the Transportation Agency of Monterey County. "I don't think the bypass was planned with that in mind. I don't think it (the bypass) will facilitate it (the development) that much," he said.

Several council members seemed enthused about the $5.4 million that Carmel is expected to receive from the nine-year tax.

That figure is based on a formula of sales tax figures from the State Board of Equalization, according to Lacy.

"With this funding available, we can do a master plan for every street in our city," White said. "We could do an awful lot of traffic calming. Over 60 percent of this money is coming from visitors. If you're going to get in bed with the devil, I guess this is a pretty good opportunity of getting in bed with the devil."

"I do believe that Measure N is primarily (about) safety in Prunedale," said city council woman Paula Hazdovac. "But in speaking with residents in city, I'm asked, 'why isn't more money spent to repair our streets?' I think we would be neglecting the residents of our community if we didn't support this measure."

Safety first

Opponents, however, questioned whether safety was really the issue. Some speakers pointed out that Caltrans has already funded a series of improvement plans for upgrading Highway 101, including a planned interchange at San Miguel Canyon Road.

"The public has been misled to believe that Measure N is about safety," said Clark Beck. "The most important safety measures have already been funded without additional taxes next year."

But Lacy, who lives in a box canyon off Highway 101, disagreed. "What do you do with the other 85 driveways that open onto 101? I cannot go to work or to the store except by 101."

Lacy asked whether, as traffic continues to increase, "Are you going to say that when I go to town, I have to wait 10 minutes instead of five minutes?"

Councilwoman Sue McCloud sympathized with Lacy's plight. "It is just unbelievable the amount of traffic and trucks. You can't quibble with statistics. With 1,300 injuries and 40 deaths, we've got to start someplace," she said.

But Livingston wasn't convinced that the Measure N was all about safety.

"I have grave concerns why $200 million is needed for something that's costing between 50 and 82 million," she said. "Why not spend it on areas that have equal carnage, such as Salinas Road at Highway 1?"

From sardines to spectacular success . . .

The restaurateurs transformed a run-down building that once served as a cafeteria for sardine workers at Cannery Row into one of the highest-grossing dining establishments in the U.S.

Fine Arts 5K walk and run delivers fun under the sun

By JERRY STEWART

WITH THE graces of Mother Nature shining down upon them, more than 500 Carmelites and visiting runners swarmed the streets of Carmel Oct. 4 as the 4th annual Fine Arts 5K Run and Walk got underway.

Although the weather days before the race was ominous, the clouds parted and the fog departed, leaving participants basking in the sun's rays.

"It couldn't have been a more perfect day," said race director Elizabeth Smith. "The weather was spectacular and the event was fabulous."

In the men's division, 23-year-old Will Allan of Carmel broke through the finish line first in a time of 15:33, beating second-place finisher Jose Aispuro of Watsonville by a mere four seconds.

Allan, a 1992 graduate of Carmel High, cut off 50 seconds from his third-place finishing time of 16:23 in 1997.

"It felt kind of nice to win it," said Allan, who runs about 40 miles a week and works for a magazine devoted to running. "I had been on a layoff for a while and kept coming in second so finishing first was definitely gratifying."

In the women's competition, 33-year-old Ramona Lopez-Young of Watsonville finished first with a time of 18:21.

Thirty-eight-year-old Christina Price was the first Carmelite to cross the finish line, ending her jaunt in 21:30.

Other local top 20 finishers in the men's division include Brad Holbrook (16:42, third place), Andrew Creely (17:48, ninth), Jim Poulos (18:59, 16th) and Thomas Augustus of Carmel Valley (19:15, 20th) and Cleveland Thayer of Pebble Beach (18:04, 12th).

Fifty-year-old Susan Love, who finished in a remarkable 22:15 (11th place) and 16-year old fellow Carmelite Kristina Hawley (22:43, 12th) made the top 20 on the ladies side.

Carmel resident Will Allan, the overall winner of the Carmel Fine Arts 5K, didn't have much time to enjoy the scenery of the beautiful course. The 23-year-old finished the race with a winning time of only 15:33.

Others finishing the course included 9-year-old Shawn Marchetta (29:15) and 81-year-old Pierre Delfausse (38:46) of Carmel on the men's side and 8-year-old Carmel Valley resident Candace Eldridge (56:21) and 78-year-old Carmelite Paula Weber (52:30) on the women's side.

No participants were able to claim the $750 bonus prize which is awarded to any runner completing the course in less than 15 minutes.

Last year's race, won by Jamey Harris of San Carlos, was surrounded by controversy when a volunteer course guide erred, sending some participants in the wrong direction.

Harris' winning time of 14:59, arbitrarily given due to the unforeseen circumstances, still stands as the course record.

CHS tennis courts renovation nearly done

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE CARMEL Unified School District and the Neighbors Excited About Tennis Committee recently announced that the reconstruction work being performed on the CHS tennis courts will be completed by Oct. 20.

The committee raised $22,000 through the donations from city residents, CHS Alumni and local businesses to supplement the $30,000 allocated by the Carmel Unified School District to have the work done.

To celebrate the renovation of the courts, which have not been serviced for over 30 years, there will be free tennis clinics and a round robin conducted by the professional staff of the Carmel Valley Racquet and Health Club on Oct. 24 starting at 9 a.m.

A barbecue thanking all of the donors will follow at noon.

The CHS tennis court project is the first of three phases of tennis court renovation in the school district. The tennis courts at Carmel Middle School and Tularcitos Elementary School will be remodeled next.

NELSON HIENTZLEMAN, 7, woofs louder than anyone, and he has a white ribbon to prove it. At last year's Blessing of the Animals at Carmel Mission on The Feast of St. Francis, Nelson won the coveted loudest Bark award — and if you've ever heard him practice on Carmel Beach just about any morning, you will understand why.

At water's edge earlier this week, Nelson was decked out in a salmon-colored cotton kerchief and lavender velvet collar when we were introduced, a handsome combination on a handsome fellow. He demonstrated his woofing proficiency with self-assurance and dignity.

Nelson's favorite activities are, in order of preference, coming to Carmel Beach daily rain or shine, eating and, of course, barking. Being a retriever by trade, Nelson delights in fetching sticks thrown into the surf, but he has no interest in, nor will he bring back a thrown ball, unless he happens to have come upon an abandoned one in the sand, thereby establishing proprietary rights which render the ball worthy of retrieval.

Nelson's golden fur is dense and luxurious, and his brown eyes — fringed with thick lashes — look out at the world with intelligence and benevolence. His mom, Marguerite, says that Nelson is a lover, not a fighter, and that is why his ear was severely injured in mid-September when he was attacked by two Scottish terriers on leashes. Nelson weighs in at over 90 pounds, but having not a vengeful bone in his body, and being a card-carrying pacifist, did not attack his attackers. Instead, he magnanimously turned the other ear.

The flawed law that fosters bad lawsuits

THE CALIFORNIA Environmental Quality Act is one of the state's most important statutes. But it has a major flaw that encourages pointless lawsuits such as the one filed last month by Enid Sales against the City of Carmel.

Enacted in 1970, CEQA's purpose is to protect the health of California's people, animals and plants by requiring that new development not unduly harm the environment.

Reducing pollution, protecting endangered plants and animals — these goals were so important that in passing CEQA the legislature stepped in and started requiring city councils and boards of supervisors to meet environmental standards before approving development projects. Because of CEQA, land use decisions — previously made only at the local level — have, for 28 years, been made according to the state's rules.

The statute was passed at a time of peak public alarm over environmental degradation and coincided with the advent of Earth Day, which was first observed on April 22, 1970. Accordingly, the legislature wrote into CEQA an exhaustive list of environmental concerns.

The environment, CEQA says, includes "physical conditions which will be affected by a proposed project including air, land, water, minerals, flora, fauna and noise."

So far so good.

Unfortunately, the legislature also decided that the environment included "objects of historic or aesthetic significance."

Including such things in a law designed to protect the environment was a mistake.

The destruction of old house on Scenic Rd. is not an environmental issue. Whether the house stays or goes, the future of the planet and the health of its creatures will be unaffected. No plant or animal species will notice its loss.

Certainly, the issue is not worthy of state intervention in the decision about the home's fate made by the Carmel City Council.

Enid Sales doesn't want the Donati house demolished. Fair enough. Quite a few other people think its demise is fine, especially the couple who owns the property and want to replace the old house with a new one. The resolution of such disputes among humans is what politics is for.

Both sides had plenty of opportunity to present their arguments to the city council. There is no evidence that the council's deliberations were tainted or corrupt in any way. And then the council made its decision. The house could go. Sales lost.

But that isn't good enough for Sales, who apparently believes that she knows better than her neighbors what is good for them.

Unfortunately, CEQA gives her an opportunity to pursue her complaint under the guise of "protecting the environment" — a mantle under which any petty gripe can pretend to be a major public issue.

We hope a judge will quickly dismiss Sales' suit as an insignificant distraction. The legislature should remove historic and aesthetic concerns from the list of "environmental impacts" covered by CEQA. Meanwhile, Sales should take her case for stricter historic preservation laws to the people of Carmel and their elected representatives on the city council. She should do her best to convince them that she is right. And she should accept their decisions about local issues, even when she loses.

Dear Editor,

On behalf of the Carmel Heritage Society, I wish to clarify that our organization does not have any affiliation with Friends of Carmel Cultural Heritage, the organization that filed a lawsuit against the City of Carmel-by-the-Sea.

The mission of the Carmel Heritage Society is to protect, preserve and promote the cultural heritage of the community in a way that encourages public recognition and participation so that people will have a greater knowledge and appreciation of the community of Carmel-by-the-Sea and its sphere of influence.

Tree owner responds

Dear Editor,

In her Oct. 2 letter regarding my tree removal request, Ms. Karen Ferlito, chairperson of the Carmel Forest and Beach Commission, makes the assumption that I am an "absentee owner" new to the Carmel area and thus unappreciative of the importance of preserving its trees.

Having children who attend school here, I am here a part of every week. Also, my family — native Californians for several generations — has received accolades for preserving California's natural habitat.

In 1996 my husband was honored by 15 U.S. and California environmental preservation agencies for providing, in California's Central Valley, over 2,000 acres for a first-ever perpetual conservation easement, dedicating 1,500 acres to wildlife-friendly crops, restoring 102 acres to wetlands, and supporting ground-breaking research involving the integration of

City Talk

Citizens get action at Open House

By KEN WHITE
Mayor of Carmel-by-the-Sea

TWO WEEKS ago, City Administrator Jere Kersnar and I hosted a Saturday Open House at City Hall. We were delighted to welcome approximately 30 residents and to hear them express themselves concerning their community and its government. We were able to answer most of their questions on the spot and we received a total of 26 comments/inquiries/suggestions/complaints. A summary of these remarks has been prepared and distributed to the City Council and to the City's Department Directors. Action has already been initiated in response to them.

During the Open House, a discussion arose that led to our decision that it is perhaps time to communicate again with our residents about some of our responsibilities as citizens. As we live in a very special place, it takes a lot of effort — not only on the part of City staff, but also on the part of each of us — to keep our village clean and neat. So, then, the purpose of this City Talk is to share with you some of the comments made at the Open House by some of your fellow citizens.

We have talked before in this space about a lot of these things, most of which boil down to common courtesy and regard for the health, safety and appearance of our village. We have laws and Municipal Code sections that cover it all, but we cannot legislate good manners. For instance, even a quick glance around town will confirm that it is once more becoming a habit for lots of us to leave those yellow and green recycling bins out on the street for long periods of time after the collection day.

One of the great joys of life can be having a household pet; taking a nice, leisurely walk with our dog on the leash is one of things enjoyed most by many Carmelites. Sadly, we need reminding that we must carry disposal equipment with us on these walks so that when, inevitably, these pets of ours answer nature's call we are prepared.

One of the really positive things I see people doing a lot is the small act of picking up trash found along the ground and putting it in the nearest container. Our residential and commercial districts are very precious to us and we would hope that all citizens would make a similar effort, an effort that can help undo the effect of others who may be unthinking or careless.

If you have extra household or garden waste, please take advantage of the quarterly extra pickup service that the City provides through its contract with Carmel Disposal Service. The next such extra disposal opportunity is coming the week of 19-23 October. Let's all take advantage of this chance to make a significant contribution to the appearance of our village.

It's time that we all look around a bit, time to renew our efforts to keep Carmel-by-the-Sea beautiful and clean—the way we want it.

Remembering John Denver . . . one year after plane crash that took his life

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE FIRST anniversary of the tragic death of John Denver will be commemorated Oct. 11 and 12 in Pacific Grove near the spot where his experimental plane smashed into the Pacific Ocean last year.

On Sunday, October 11 at noon, John Denver fans and friends will gather at the crash site (Ocean View and Asilomar Boulevards) for a musical "Earth Vigil" to pay tribute to the singer who devoted so much to the environment.

According to Jerry Rubin, who is organizing the event with Friends of John Denver, "all of the residents of the area, including elected officials, chamber of commerce representatives, religious leaders of all faiths, high school music students and representatives of P.G.'s acclaimed Monarch Butterfly Sanctuary are being invited to join in the two days of special events."

At 1:30, fans will leave on a one-mile "Earth Walk" along Ocean View to Lovers Point, where a memorial Monterey cypress tree will be planted to honor Denver. Musicians will be playing some favorite Denver songs.

Also, a beach clean-up will take place from Lovers Point to the crash site beginning at 9 a.m.

On Monday, an anniversary vigil will be held from 4:30 until 6:30 p.m. at the crash site, with a silent candlelight circle taking place at 5:28, the exact moment of the crash. Also on that day, individuals and radio stations are being encouraged to play the many John Denver songs such as "Country Roads," "Rocky Mountain High," and "Leaving on a Jet Plane," which Denver wrote.

"We want people all over the country to plant trees on October 12," Rubin told The Pine Cone, "in honor of John Denver's dedication to beautifying our planet."

Mayor Sandy Koffman is going to help plant the tree, along with local children, according to Rubin, who added that shuttles will be provided for anyone who wants to go on the walk but is not physically able.

Friends of John Denver have applied to the city of Pacific Grove for a commemorative bench to be placed near the cypress tree. They have been told there is a waiting list, which is fine with them. "I don't think John Denver would want to go to the head of a waiting list," said Rubin.

Half of the proceeds from a t-shirt that will be sold, is going to environmental projects in Pacific Grove, according to Rubin.

Robinson Jeffers Festival: lectures, banquet, poetry walk

TWO SEMINARS are planned for Saturday, Oct. 10 as part of a weekend celebration of poet Robinson Jeffers at the Tor House Foundation's annual festival. As a commencement to the festival, a reception will be held from 4 to 6 p.m. in the Tor House gardens on Friday, Oct. 9, but is limited in attendance to those who have advance reservations for the combined Saturday seminars or the Saturday evening banquet. The first seminar will take place at the Carmel Women's Club from 10 a.m. until noon on the 10th, with the topic of discussion, "Robinson Jeffers' Influence on Young Writers." A second seminar will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. which will cover,

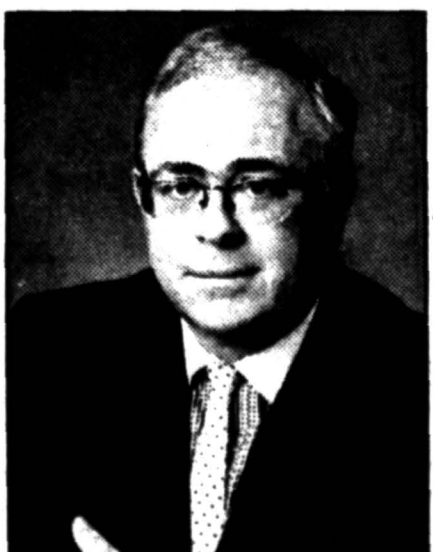

"Robinson Jeffers and Approaches to Narrative Poetry," moderated by Dana Gioia.

Four distinguished poets
Participating in the discussions will be four distinguished poets: Mark Jarman of

Vanderbilt University, a Guggenheim Fellow and author of the narrative poem, "Iris"; George Keithley, author of the narrative poem, "The Donner Party" — a Book of the Month Club Selection; Robert McDowell, critic, editor and director of Story Line Press; and Diane Thiel of the University of Miami, winner of the 1998 Jeffers prize for poetry. Joining the discussions will be scholar Maureen Girard of the Monterey Peninsula College English department, and poet and critic Dana Gioia of New York. Admission to both sessions is $10, or $8 for one session. Saturday evening, Kevin Starr, SEE JEFFERS PAGE 2B

World Cup exposure sparked New Tamba Trio tour

THIS WEEKEND will be the last chance to check out Spanish Bay regulars Helcio Milito and Weber Iago (formerly Drummond) at the Pebble Beach resort hotel before they head out on their upcoming world tour. Brazilian percussionist Milito, a charter member of the original Tamba Trio that was responsible for introducing the music of Carlos Jobim to North America, finds himself in the limelight once again. Sparked by the use of the Tamba Trio bossa nova classic "Mas Que Nada" during the airing of a sports shoe commercial at last year's World Cup Soccer Finals, the music of Jobim is now the latest European pop music craze charting on radio playlists and getting heavy play at dance clubs throughout the continent.

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

When the call came to go on tour, Milito sent for original bassist and vocalist Bebeto and invited Weber Iago to replace original keyboardist Luis Eca who passed away in 1992. The trio performs regularly at the Inn at Spanish Bay 7 to 11 p.m. every Thursday through Sunday but after this week will be on a tour of Europe, Japan and Brazil under the new moniker, The New Tamba Trio. There is no charge for music at Spanish Bay and valet parking is also complimentary. Catch them before they leave and wish them bon voyage. Information: 647-7511

The Jazz Store in Carmel features straight-ahead jazz composer and piano virtuoso Phil Markowitz at 7:30 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 10, touring in support of his latest and second CD release on Passage Records, "Taxi Ride." Perhaps best known for his side work with saxophonist Dave Liebman, Markowitz is a notable jazz composer, as well. Former New York City bandmate Toots Thielemans and pianist Bill Evans recorded the Markowitz composition "Sno' Peas" on their Grammy-nominated Affinity album and Thielemans appears on Markowitz's latest recording. Joining Markowitz this Saturday at the Jazz Store are longtime trio mates, bassist Roy Cummings and drummer Glenn Davis. Markowitz, a self-described "contemporary melodic player," has also played with Chet Baker, the Mel Lewis Orchestra and Al DiMeola. Tickets are $25.

The following Saturday, Oct. 17, vocalist Stephanie Crawford will appear at the Jazz Store supported by the popular Babatunde Trio. Crawford, the recipient of France's highest award for jazz vocalists, the Django D'or, recently released her second CD.

For more information and/or reservations to both shows call 624-6432.

The Media Room in Pacific Grove continues to serve an eclectic lineup of music, and Friday, Oct. 9 branches out even further with the presentation of the 1st "Poetry and Ambient Chill-Out," an evening of spoken word, music and ambient spin. Tonight's happening begins at 7 and features KAZU public radio air personalities and world beat poets Cary Lowney, Leslie Shill and Iskandar

Bob Norman

At 7 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 11 in the Media Room, English folk musicians Jane Threlfall and Carl Hogsden carry on the English ballad tradition in concert, accompanying themselves on guitars, mandolin, Appalachian dulcimer and various percussion instruments. The young couple from Lancashire and West Sussex, respectively, perform in the style of Steeleye Span and Richard Thompson. Their first album, entitled "Who?" was released in 1995 and three successful tours of the United States followed. Tickets are $10 in advance and $12 at the door.

Also at the Media Room in Pacific Grove — a double billing featuring folksinger Bob Norman and Celtic balladeer and song poet David Nigel Lloyd on Saturday, Oct. 17. Norman, former editor-in-chief for folk music magazine "Sing Out!," is wrapping up his 11th California tour next week, this time in support of his latest CD, "To the Core." Norman's career in folk music has spanned more than 30 years and his songs have been performed by many other artists, including Pete Seeger.

Following Norman, David Nigel Lloyd considers himself primarily a poet who sings his words. Appearing last month at a benefit concert for local KAZU personality Tam Patterson, Lloyd was one of the highlights of the emotional evening. His latest CD (his fifth), "How Like Ghosts Are We," blends his own poetry with traditional songs of Britain, Ireland, North and South America and Australia. All the material to be performed on Oct. 17 is from this release. For tickets and information, call 373-7379.

KAZU air personality Cary Lowney

Soekardi plus special guests Aaron Yamaguchi and pianist Darryl Joyce. Tickets are $12 at the door or $10 in advance at the Bookmark in Pacific Grove or at Do Re Mi music stores in Carmel or Monterey.

its final meeting at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 14. Newcomers are welcome to audit this meeting for free and to learn about future sessions.

And as if this were not enough, May — in conjunction with Eileen Hu's Victory Press of Marina — is holding a booksigning combined with a book, cassette and doll give-away to launch the historical book, "The Legend of Mu Lan, a Heroine of Ancient China," on Saturday, Oct. 10 for one hour only, 10:30 to 11:30 a.m., on the Thunderbird patio. Children of all ages are invited. There will be Chinese snacks, too.

The multi-cultural book is historically correct, while the recently released Disney "Mulan" cartoon has been banned from screening in China. Young girls and boys in China learn about equality of the sexes through the legend of Mu Lan, a Chinese girl of the Song Dynasty who took her aging father's place in battle disguised as a man. Eileen collaborated with the authors by translating their text into English and publishing the true legend written by Jiang, Wei and illustrated by Jiang, Cheng An. The water-color illustrations are exquisite, and the book, cassette and doll are displayed at the Smithsonian Institute. Because the text and the narration (done by Eileen's mother, Lucy Ko Hu, and by X. X. Chen) are in both English and Chinese, the book is required reading for students in the Asian American Studies Departments of U.C. Berkeley and San Francisco State.

GLIMPSES OF HIGHWAY 68

Again this Summer
the soft fleece shimmers

in the sun
above the morning tule fog.

Waves of grass ripple up slopes set in curved darken borders in swelling dryness, below a cover of sapphire blue

Dots of silhouetting horses set, against live oaks and buckeye, patiently waiting for me to ponder antiquity, as I pass in a vacuum
on a river of asphalt.

I glide through God's repose everyday,
seeing California commons rolling, heaving in the blazing gold.

The first takes place at 10 a.m. and the second at 2 p.m. at San Carlos at Ninth, Carmel. Fee: $10 for the two sessions, $8 for one. ### Local History lecture series announced for 1999

ARLENE HESS, librarian/archivist of the Henry Meade Williams Local History Department, has announced the 1999 series of Monday lectures. As in the past, the first three talks will be given twice, once at 10:30 a.m. and again at 2:30 p.m. at the Park Branch of Harrison Memorial Library, corner of Sixth and Mission, Carmel.

Richard Hughey, a retired lawyer and legal writer who is currently at work on a biography of George Sterling, will commence the lecture series on January 25 with a talk on "Jack London in Carmel."

Cynthia Medeiros is the second speaker and will appear on February 22 to discuss "Nora May French: Her Life and Poetry." Medeiros, a master's degree candidate in English literature at California State University at Chico, will discourse on French's poetry, her association with the Carmel bohemians and her suicide.

"Lester Rowntree" is the title of Rosemary Donlon's talk on March 29. Rowntree, for whom the Arboretum in Carmel was named, was an avid gardener who was instrumental in raising people's consciousness concerning the use of native plants.

Change of venue

The time and venue for the last two lectures changes to 7 p.m. in Carpenter Hall in the Sunset Cultural Center, Mission between Eighth and Tenth.

On April 26, Bernard H "Buzz" Schulte, born in 1918 in Carmel Valley, will speak from first hand knowledge of "Favorite Stories of Carmel Valley."

"Cole Weston's Life and Times in Carmel," is the topic of Cole Weston himself. Weston will review his 34 years of making prints from his famous father's negatives; of his stint as Carmel's first cultural director; as a successful director of plays at the Forest Theater; and as a photographer, and his latest book, "Cole Weston, at Home and Abroad."

A Poetry Challenge...

EDITOR'S NOTE: Because of a frequent shortage of space — which has resulted in Village Verse being omitted from the This Week section of the paper a number of times — we are revising our former specifications for poetry submissions from no more than 21 lines, to no more than 12 lines.

This is a challenge that will allow poets the opportunity to polish their poems to a gem-like luster. Send submissions, one at a time, to Poetry Editor, The Carmel Pine Cone, P.O. Box G-1, Carmel-by-the-Sea, CA 93921.

Coastal Commission accepts entries in amateur photo contest

'Jazzbo Blue': little jewel 'swings' only one more time

By PATRICK WHITEHURST

THE CARMEL Performing Arts Festival features an obscure piece called "Swingin' From The Vine: Tales of the Jazzbo Blue." It opened Oct. 2 at the Carmel Ballet Academy on Mission Street in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Don't let either the mise-en-scene or the title throw you; "Swingin'" is a little jewel. And it does swing. Written by Garland Thompson, Jr., it is also a showcase for his many talents. Poet, actor, playwright and producer, Thompson wears all the hats in this presentation that was first introduced in spring 1997 in the Unicorn Theatre's Second Stage Series. Developed in cooperation with actor/director Nina Capriola, this is undeniably an esoteric trip set to music that takes us from the dawn of creation, through the jazz age, and up to the present, with just a suggestion of the future beyond 2001.

This from the notes about the play: "From the very beginning the character of the Different Monkey arrived to be our guide through the mystical and magical transformation that has been humanity's path." If that ain't esoteric, what is?

Not that "esoteric" is bad, but go prepared to take notes because we'll be asking questions afterward.

For sheer entertainment however, there is not one moment of the one hour show that drags. The cast of three, plus the musical trio of "Alligator and the Bayou Boogie Band" featuring Alligator himself on guitar, Floyd Walker on keyboard, and Joe Velasquez on alto sax, had us figuratively "Swingin' from the Vine."

Narrated throughout from background tape by Thompson, we are treated to some old-time radio in modern idiom, plus some outstanding stage work.

Garland Thompson, Jr. is the creative force behind 'Swingin' from the Vine.'

Thompson takes on multiple poetic characters with ease and finger-snapping poise. Susan Cheryl, his supporting actress in the roles of The Beautiful (and sexy) Woman, whoever she may be at the time, also assumes many parts. Besides being ideally cast for her characters, Cheryl is also a good actress. And Colin Manor, as the DJ, does what a DJ does best... he jockeys disks.

The stage setting by David Wagner, though simple, is just what the play calls for... not too much — not too little. The sound design by Dennis Lansing was complicated and well done, though perhaps a decibel or two too much for the small auditorium.

Even if you don't believe in Darwinian evolution, you will enjoy this stage production. It is unfortunate that there is only one more performance of the show at 8 p.m. Saturday, October 10. It deserves more exposure, and more people should have the opportunity to see it. Especially if you like good jazz!

Pub food expertly conceived at Carmel's Sherlock Holmes

NOT TOO long ago, I was importuned to write a pub review. I protested, insisting it's not the material from which restaurant reviews are made. I must apologize, (gracefully I hope), and admit that while today's subject, Sherlock Holmes, may not be an haute cuisine establishment, pub food in Carmel seems part and parcel of our village soul.

Sherlock Holmes allows me to squeak by on several fronts by presenting itself as a "pub/restaurant," and it gives me pleasure to so squeak. The food is uniformly excellent!

Although heavily frequented by tourists enjoying the shops and splendiferous gardens of the Barnyard, savvy locals are the backbone of Benita Updike and Birgit Mouton's clientele. The menu category names are creative, derived from Conan Doyle's series (with permission from his Estate) and begin your experience with a chuckle. Munchies are entitled "The First Clues," appetizers listed under the "Changing of the Guard," Mexican offerings are classified as "Sherlock's Latin Adventures," and so on.

The Latin "adventures" are not only unexpected, but unexpectedly savory. Tacos Caramba are the rolled, deep-fried version, partnered with the traditional refried beans and rice. "Moriarty's Latin Lover" is a "take home half" plate of a beef taco and a beef burrito topped with homemade chili, onions and cheese. My choice, when I'm yearning for my former Mexico City home, is the Tostada Latina; a salad served in a crisp tortilla shell, generously piled with all the goodies which normally adorn pub nachos. Holmes certainly knew his Mexican food.

The indoor/outdoor venue subscribes to the happy theory that if soup is good (which it is), it will be twice as good if served in a sourdough bread bowl, although their fine French onion soup comes in a "croc." Add an order of Garden Fresh Salad and I'm ready for dessert.

Every once in a while I get a hankering for "Fish and Chips," and it's here that the Pub really shines. The fish is always fresh from Monterey Bay; usually a mild rock cod. The fries are toasty brown and the bottle of proper malt vinegar comes to the table along with catsup (if you must).

Continuing with quick food, if you're busting for a hot dog, the "Hound of the Baskervilles" is the Irish wolfhound of franks. It's all beef and then, while you're at it, gobble up the version with chili, chopped onions and grated Jack cheese. (Time for the question? Why does everyone break up when my gourmet persona eats something under this heading. Sometimes the Epicurean hat gets too heavy!)

Sherlock's Sandwich Board has all the usuals, masquerading under literary names, and the "Diogenes Club" is my first choice. Partnered with your choice of truly browned fries, cole slaw, potato or green salad, there's enough turkey, bacon, lettuce and tomato stacked on good rye bread to allow one to take home a second meal or snack.

True to its Baker Street inspiration, the kitchen specializes in meat pies and Cornish pasties (chicken or beef). The "Soho Spectacular" (beef and kidney), is straight out of Piccadilly Circus and, when you're really hungry, worth taking the stairs to the restaurant two at a time.

Served after 4 p.m., none of the diners disappoint. Baby back pork ribs are tender and nicely sauced. Pork chops, New York Steak, Filet Mignon and the Buckingham Palace Feast (Steak and Prawns), are all char-broiled and arrive with baked, fried or mashed potatoes, plus England's de rigueur peas or mixed veggies. This is also a place for excellent Prime Rib cooked to your liking and roasted with Yorkshire pudding below to sop up the juices.

Irene Adler's (she was written as the mystery woman in Holmes' life), "Just Desserts" are simple and satisfying. Bread pudding with brandy sauce; a creamy, made-in-house baked custard; carrot cake; a fresh fruit pie and Benita's favorite, a Tuxedo cake with chocolate mousse as the bottom layer. Delicious, and often ordered by local business folk who drop in for tea or coffee in the late afternoon.

When the weather allows, the outside deck is a pleasant place to enjoy the flowers and share a bit of nature with the resident bird beggars. There's one gimlet-eyed black bird with a bent leg, who I swear knows me, 'cause he always whistles and comes down to a nearby chair to say hello!

While they offer only a limited selection of inexpensive wines, as is to be expected, the beer list is truly impressive, numbering several dozen bottled labels, both imported and domestic, as well as nine foamy "on tap" thirst-quenchers in mugs, pints and pitchers. All in all, Sir Arthur and his characters would forego the satire and be both sated and pleased.

Mexico — bring us your best tennis!

THIS WEEK, boys and girls, we shall learn the fine art of procrastination.

Step #1: Sit in front of the computer to begin typing a column. Step #2: Notice the dust on the monitor screen and get up to clean it off. Step #3: Sit and then set the document's font and page format. Step #4: While straining for creativity by fiddling with your eyebrow, notice that one hair definitely needs to be plucked, so get up and do it. Step #5: Sit and type the title and date of the column. Step #6: Remember that you haven't given your child — i.e. dog — any quality time for the last several months, so you must now at this very minute play fetch. Step #7: Get back to your seat and outline the column with the basics. Step #8: Note the discomfort of the chair you're sitting on and decide you just have to try another one even if it means rearranging the whole room. Step #9: Resume writing the column. Step #10: Realize that the notes you needed were in the jacket you turned in to the dry cleaners that weekend.

Congratulations! It is past midnight and you're nowhere near the completion of your task. You have successfully achieved the rank of Master Procrastinator.

TAKE A group of gutsy tennis-playing American ladies and throw them up against "slightly" younger, energetic Mexican women and you get a surfeit of groans, mutual respect and good-natured ribbing.

People and Places

By Sissi Maleki

Thanks to Yve Ramos, who decided to invite some friends from the Mexican town of Querétaro where she resides part-time, a group of serious tennis gals shared three tennis-filled days this past weekend. They played all over the place — Rancho Cañada, Beach Club, Mission Ranch, Spanish Bay and John Gardiner's. Locals included Judy Bramble, Judy Dow, Maggie Eastwood, Kathy Franscioni, Peggy Gelke, Bonnie Hill,

Heidi Hollman, Toshi Lombardo, Dana Opal, Brenda Skokal and Linda Wilsey. A memorable weekend all around.

AT&T charities distribution takes place amidst suspense

Hollywood has its Oscars. One night per year suspense rules 'til the envelopes with winners' names are opened. Our area has the AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am proceeds. One night per year suspense rules 'til the envelopes are opened and the amount of the individual grants from the Golf Charities is revealed. Overall, the generosity of the group is immense: $2 million distributed for just this past year, $22 million to date. But it was an eye-opener to see much of the decorum usually present among non-profit VIPs fly away as they ripped open their envelopes on Tuesday, September 29th.

What a gathering it was! From Ron Johnson, former Philadelphia Eagles player — and Morley Brown's good friend — to Jim Merrigan from AT&T's New Jersey headquarters. He elicited laughs during his short speech when he pointed out that despite the rotten weather we've been having, "any kind of day on the Monterey Peninsula is worth the best day in New Jersey!"

I think Clint Eastwood caused some real confusion among some of the volunteer kids of the Boys & Girls Club. They were torn between awe at meeting him and the temptation to fall in with his down-to-earth attitude toward them. Clint said the real challenge is "putting on an event that the people want to keep coming back to." Dina Ruiz, in the meantime, appeared like a whirlwind and made sure the event was all that it should be. I think it's great to see the marriage of minds between an energetic, conscientious local girl and a well-seasoned shrewd businessman with a respect for the future.

'The special tonight is fish stew'

This week, the prize for original entertainment benefiting a good cause goes to Il Fornaio, which partnered with our local Breast Cancer Action Group on October 1st and coordinated a mouthwatering fish stew competition, the Sagra Del Pesce. Entries from L'Escargot, Stillwater Cove, Ventana Inn, Grasing's, Zig Zag, Michael's and, of course, Il Fornaio, vied for first place while guests, like sponsor Granite Construction's David & Mary Kaye Watts and Ron & Betsy Goerss savored "every morsel and every mussel!" Survivor and sponsor Audrey Schrader was having an unsuccessful time keeping a lid on fellow sponsor Allen Taylor, who was being totally irrepressible. ("I was bad before it was fashionable to be bad!")

Dina Ruiz joined colleague (and one of the judges for the evening) Dan Green for the TV camera to add her not-inconsiderable push to the cause.

Volunteers at the event included Doris Davis, who lost a daughter to breast cancer a year ago. One of the founders of the group, Phyllis Rochelle, explained that despite the many support groups for cancer patients, there are certain needs specific to breast cancer patients that only a group like the BCAG can fulfill.

Fashion show for a good cause

The ladies boutique, Chico's in Carmel Plaza, picked a great sunny day, Saturday, October 3rd, to stage a fashion show highlighting Breast Cancer Awareness Month.

Breast cancer survivors modeled its fashions. The graceful and beautiful lineup included Dani Marr, Nancy Porteous-Thomas, Marcia Sieling, Sandra Hornbuckle, Linda Bales-teri and Diane Johnson.

Dominoes International hits the peninsula

Well, I thought dominoes sounded much less intimidating than bridge or chess... but after hearing Sue Tuttle O'Brien's traumatic experience, I think I'll watch from a distance.

Turns out she tried to play once but it's so competitive everyone yelled at

■ Library Foundation hard at work

How do you tell kids of today that "surfing the 'net" can never replace the comfy, warm pleasure of curling up with a good book? You can't. You have to wait 'til they find out for themselves. But were it not for efforts of groups like the Carmel Public Library Foundation, the fundraising heart of our local library, there would be no (read: NO) money for any book-buying, much less educational programs. The Foundation's Board of Directors celebrated the kickoff of the 1998 Annual Fundraising Campaign on October 2nd in the wonderful reading hall of Harrison Library.

Campaign co-chair Belinda Vidor was feeling very relieved that just the night before, her fellow co-chair (and hubby) Jim Holliday had finally sent off his manuscript on the history of mining in California . . . a long overdue project. (Being the wife of a writer sounds quite challenging!)

Board member Virginia Stone mentioned she is particularly attached to the library given that her father, who moved to Carmel in the '50s, had for years been responsible for lighting the reading hall's fireplace every Thursday evening. What a lovely tradition!

■ Performing Arts Festival blasts off

With the exceptional treat of background guitar folk music from Bach Festival's David Gordon, an eclectic mix of CPAF performers, audience members and staff lived it up on October 2nd at the Barnyard's La Gondola to mark the start of the now-in-progress festival.

I was fascinated by one of the plays featured, the "Minstrel Show," described to me by one of the stars of the play, Jonathon Wilson. It's about a true story never told before, but recognized as "one of the most heinous crimes in American history": the 1919 lynching of a Nebraska man accused of raping a white girl. I certainly hope the production gets the attention it deserves. Nebraskan Jonathan, by the way, talked as he sat huddled by the fire, unprepared for Carmel and freezing in his shorts!

A big supporter of the festival, Brian Gingerich of Monterey Mattress Company, explained that quality productions normally taken for granted in big cities are exceptionally hard to find in smaller areas like our peninsula. Which is probably why Brian, a poet and songwriter at heart, keeps "coming back to mattresses: everyone needs one and it works!"

Quote of the evening (which shall remain anonymous!): "Find me a normal, drug-free man!"

■ Fourth Annual Fine Arts 5K

There is a real community feeling in Carmel's annual Fine Arts 5K Run, this year held on October 4th. It's a good time to catch up with neighbors, friends and old acquaintances that seem to fall between the cracks in our busy lives. And what better way to do that than with a champagne brunch to the music of the Kenny Stahl Trio, sponsored by the Pine Inn and Alain Pinel Realtors. You'll notice I don't mention the running part. Nor the walking. After all, it was Sunday morning and I consider that a God-given rest day. But please: I totally respect all you achievers! Just don't expect me to join you. I had more fun trading jokes with master jokester and salesman Curt Bender, who's moved from the simple world of cell phones to the esoteric and challenging world of Internet services.

Event director Elizabeth Smith confessed the following (and I risk my life in quoting her!): "I asked everyone to dance naked and pray for sun and the sky finally said, 'Enough already, I'll give you the sun!'" Hey, whatever works - the day was absolutely gorgeous.

■ Bach Festival never sleeps...

My extra eyes and ears (in the form of Emily Woudenberg) tell me there was a wonderful concert on October 4, organized by the Bach Festival crowd and the CPAF, featuring pianist Janina Fialkowska. Thanks to supporters like Betty & Jephtha Wade who sponsored Janina's trip here, guests were treated to a performance which "made the piano sing."

"Marie, Moss Landing" by William F. Stone Jr.

"In the Clover" by Alicia Meheen

CONTINUES FROM PREVIOUS PAGE

Wilda Northrop, Alicia Meheen and William F. Stone Jr. will show their paintings through November 4 at the association's galleries on Dolores Street between 5th and 6th, Carmel.

An abstract and linear artist who uses vibrant colors mixed with other media, Golding's style is distinctive and recognizable in her works of line and forms.

Wilda Northrop, in contrast, is a representative painter who contrasts the stark white of paper on which she paints with intense colors of the still life subjects she portrays. Northrop is a signature member of the American Watercolor Society, the National Watercolor Society and Watercolor West.

Painting in transparent watercolor and using a strong color palette, William F. Stone Jr. describes his work as "stylized realism." Stone begins a painting by laying flat washes over dry areas of a drawing. Overlapping color washes cause tonal changes and prevent a hard-edged look to the finished painting.

Alicia Meheen, a regional plein air painter, has a loose, free-flowing style. She reaches for a "spontaneous feeling of joy" by her use of light and attempts to capture the feeling of the moment by working quickly.

Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

daily.

Tree-removal dispute between neighbors goes on

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A YEAR-AND-A-HALF old dispute over the removal of a Monterey pine tree — which has already come before the Carmel Forest and Beach Commission twice and is currently part of a lawsuit between two neighbors — was again not resolved at the Carmel City Council meeting October 6.

The council voted unanimously to send the issue back to the forest and beach commission with an updated report from a structural engineer who said that damage to one Carmel property had increased over the last year because of the tree.

The council also decided that the a concrete walkway on the property should be "lifted" so that the forest and beach commission — which has refused to approve removal of the tree both times it has come before them — will be able to determine if the tree's roots are causing damage on the property.

William and Merrily

Karges have filed a $100,000 lawsuit against their Seventh Avenue neighbors, Chris and Cindy Sedan, over alleged damage from the tree's root system. The Karges charge that the roots of the large pine have damaged their garage, foundation and wooden retaining wall.

The Sedans don't agree that their tree is damaging their neighbor's property, and they don't want it removed. Ironically, because of the lawsuit, the Sedan's attorney advised them to appeal the forest and beach commission's denial to the city council.

"We hate to be put in a position to be forced to cut it down," Chris Sedan said. "If it had not been for a lawsuit, we would not have made a request to have it cut down."

The Karges family says their garage (left) and retaining wall are being damaged by a large Monterey pine (center) belonging to their neighbors. The city council decided this week that a sidewalk between the garage and the wall should be lifted so its roots can be examined.

Planning Commission will let staff approve more types of permits

By TAMARA GRIPPI

TWO ADDITIONAL types of permits can now be approved over-the-counter at the Carmel Planning Department.

At their Sept. 30 meeting, commissioners voted to delegate minor second story additions and guest houses to the planning staff.

The planning staff already approves permits for business licenses, most signs, non-substantial remodels of first story houses, commercial roofing changes, building permits, encroachment permits and most commercial land uses.

Planning Director Brian Roseth also recommended that the planning staff should be allowed to approve several minor types of exterior changes on commercial buildings.

Current guidelines require design review by the commission itself for every exterior changes (except signs), no matter how small, according to Roseth.

However, the commissioners decided to postpone a decision on the commercial district until its subcommittee could complete its report on commercial guidelines.

Monterey Pine

The forest and beach commission denied the request to remove the tree in May, 1997, and August, 1998. Commissioners agreed that the cracks in the garage were minor and could have been caused by settling of an old structure, according to City Forester Gary Kelly.

"I assume that a root or roots are at least part of the problem, but the decision should be based on facts and in this case important information is underground," Kelly reported to the council.

At the October 7 meeting, the Karges' attorney, Vanessa Vallarta, argued that a new report from structural engineer Gerald Graebe warranted another hearing before the city.

According to Graebe's report, damage to the Karges' retaining wall and garage floor is more pronounced now than when he first inspected the property in April, 1997.

"In my opinion, the growth of the large pine tree and root system has caused the distress to wall, walk and garage," Graebe's report stated.

City councilwoman Barbara Livingston wondered if the increased damage to the retaining wall could have been caused by the fence's rotting posts, referred to in Graebe's original report.

Kelly said that the city's new "resistograph" showed that the tree had a solid internal structure and was healthy.

ships last spring, even when the club they belonged to was shut down. "They stuck with us in a really dark time," Lombardo says.

During the first month after the flood hit, Rancho Cañada employees pitched in to help clear silt-covered fairways and greens.

With managers Bob Costa, Tim Greenwald and George Young leading the way, "even people who usually work inside picked up shovels," Boston says. The silt had to be removed within seven days or the grass underneath would die.

After one month, what Lombardo calls "an eclectic course" of 18 holes stitched together from the course's usual 36 holes was open again for business. But meanwhile, the Carmel River continued to eat away at the fast-disappearing 12th hole.

"Every day for about six weeks another couple of feet disappeared into the river and washed out to sea," Boston says.

What the rains took, the rains gave

Even as the river continued turning a large portion of the course into a canyon, the Ranch Cañada staff began work on plans to repair the damage.

Lombardo is quick to praise government officials for helping get the repair work — which would require permits from eight government agencies — approved.

"Dave Potter was out here in his boots the very first morning," he says. "A colonel from the Army Corps of Engineers came out to inspect the damage personally, and Sam Farr was a great help — even though he knows I'm a Republican!" Lombardo says.

Even with all that cooperation, getting the permits he needed to restore a riverbank took months. So did the search for enough earth to rebuild the 12th hole.

The solution came when federal officials responsible for the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary told Caltrans it wouldn't be allowed to dump excavated dirt from the enormous slide at Hurricane Point in Big Sur into the Pacific Ocean.

"The dirt they were trying to get rid of was the dirt we wanted, and without it we wouldn't have had the return of the 12th hole," Lombardo says.

Eventually, 55,000 cubic yards of earth and rocks were trucked up Highway 1 by Caltrans and dumped on a piece of unused land at Rancho Cañada. The giant pile Caltrans created is still visible just off Carmel Valley Road.

The dirt was free and the trucking was done at taxpayers' expense.

"I can't say I never got anything from the federal government," Lombardo concedes.

Another 10,000 cubic yards are being brought to Rancho Cañada from a hillside at the intersection of Rancho San Carlos Rd. and Carmel Valley Road, where a dangerous curve is being eliminated.

Before the work began, the Steelhead Association rescued 2,300 trout from pools on the riverbed and moved the fish to other holding areas.

Now, a monster excavator keeps a steady stream of trucks filled as the earth is shifted from the stockpile down onto the riverbed. "They don't even pause," Boston says.

By Dec. 1, the work will be finished and the new riverbank will be lined with 12,500 tons of rip-rap.

"The natural riverbank was made of alluvial soil and riparian vegetation, which could not withstand a flood like we had this year," Lombardo says.

But the stout new riverbank will stand up to the next El Niño winter — he hopes.

PERMITS WERE GRANTED BY:

EIGHT SEPARATE government agencies had jurisdiction over the repair that was needed where the Carmel River sliced through Rancho Cañada. The agencies, all of which granted permits, were:

- Cal. State Department of Fish and Game
- Monterey County Water Resources Agency
- Monterey Planning and Building Department
- Cal. State Regional Water Quality Control Bd.
- U.S. National Marine Fisheries Agency

agricultural land and wetland habitat values in the local grassland ecological area.

But, of course, neither the amount of days a week a person spends in their home nor their level of understanding of environmental affairs is the issue. The point is that a Carmel homeowner made an obviously legitimate and necessary request to remove a house-threatening tree (one has only to see the Sept. 25 Carmel Pine Cone photo to understand this). The homeowner protested the denial which "found the tree to be more valuable than the window." A subsequent reluctant re-evaluation allowed the tree removal, but with what amounts to a hefty fine in extraneous conditions irrelevant to the legitimacy of the initial request. The home and landscaping are today as they were when the owner purchased it several years ago. For the commission to suggest future landscaping changes is perhaps appropriate. But to impose costly changes as a condition for protecting one's home from imminent damage is not.

The larger issue is not the trampled property rights of a single homeowner, but that the potential now exists for similar invasions into the rights of any Carmel property owner. We all share a responsibility to preserve the natural environment in our community and our world. We also share a responsibility to see that the rights of homeowners are not encroached upon in the process.

Sherrie Gallo, Carmel

Wants home mail delivery

Dear Editor,

I am a resident of the City of Carmel and have become increasingly frustrated by the absence of mail delivery within the city's limits. I have discovered that I am not alone with the belief that our present approach to postal delivery is antiquated. "Pet Postal Peeves" seems to be part of many Carmel citizens' conversations. Waiting in long lines at the post office to pick up overflow mail from the cramped inadequate boxes, lack of parking spaces near the post office, and constant confusion with agencies and stores when trying to explain a physical address without a house number as reference are all part of the list of complaints.

As far as I know, the present method of retrieving mail has never been put to a vote. It is puzzling that in an era when most intelligent people are aware of the poisons gasoline sends into the air we breathe, this city encourages more traffic by forcing us to drive to our post office daily. This is a lovely small town. Why ruin it by pushing more cars onto the streets? Our stamps pay for the "right" to have mail delivered and, to make it even more appealing, one or two mail delivery trucks could do the job of the hundreds of cars that are now jamming our streets.

One block away from my home, mail is delivered. Those homes have not lost their value. They have mail boxes and numbers and they all look extremely attractive. They are still "quaint". A mail box out in front does not ruin the looks of the street or individual homes. Advocates of "going to get my mail is a joy," can still do so. I agree that it's healthy to walk and making mail retrieval a highlight of one's day is great for some, but that should be an individual call. There are those who cannot drive, those who cannot walk, and those who can do neither. Give residents the option as to whether they'd prefer to have mail delivered or have a post office box.

I realize that many believe that "change is dangerous," but in "the good old days" there weren't traffic jams all year long. Let's at least attempt to partially alleviate an already bad situation by deleting one need for individuals to go out in their cars. Let the mail be brought to us.

Joan Zischke, Carmel

What Carmel's streets need

Dear Editor,

In many places throughout the world children and young people enjoy street performers — musicians, dancers, clowns, mimes and jugglers. This is not possible in many California cities including Carmel, even when proposed as part of the Performing Arts Festival that is now taking place.

This is unfortunate because street entertainers serve many important community functions: they delight and instruct children, stimulate their imagination, and are a catalyst for bringing all members of a community together, especially the young and elderly.

From observing street performers in small towns and larger cities in almost every European country one can learn that they often become a catalyst for conversation and contact among their audience. They demonstrate to children that adults too can react spontaneously and with delight, and have not altogether forgotten the "child within."

We salute the efforts of Robin McKee and the organizers of the Carmel Performing Arts Festival not only for organizing a diverse and exciting program of musical and dramatic performances, but also for their efforts to include children and young people in performances and audiences, and for offering many free events.

In addition to their aesthetic value, community festivals at their best diminish barriers and bring together community members. The more they become part of the daily life of the host city, in its streets, plazas and parks, the more they become a special experience shared by the community as a whole.

We hope that in coming years Carmel will pioneer to encourage the interest and participation of children and youth in the Carmel Arts Festival, by permitting street performers (with appropriate regulation of duration, location, and amplification) to be part of the life of the city.

Lost in court

Dear Editor,

I have advertised in your newspaper and in the Gallery Showcase magazine and was always satisfied. You are both professionals.

I, however, recently lost a case in the local Small Claims Court trying to recover some of an advance full payment for an ad in another gallery guide that was not what the publisher promised. I never saw a proof of the lay-out or had any contact with the publisher from the time he took my money until the guide was published. In court he claimed he showed me the lay-out and produced a sketch which I had never seen and referred to the full payment as a deposit. In sum, he glibly lied and the court believed him. I cannot agree with the court ruling that full payment is required when less than promised service was rendered. I went to court on principle and lost. I did learn a lesson; don't pay in advance. However, I suppose I must feel sorry for someone who lies so blatantly for $956.25.

Desperately seeking Granny

Dear Editor,

I recently read an article entitled "Unforgettable Character." It was from the Aug. 16, 1956, edition of the Carmel Pine Cone, and was reported by Larry Baretto. The article was about my paternal grandmother, Zora Emeline Curry.

People somehow become more dear to us after they are gone from this earth, and that is the case with my curiosity for learning more about "Granny."

The article mentioned the driftwood carvings she made. I am wondering if there is anyone in or near Carmel who knows Mr. Baretto, or who might know anyplace where I could locate one of her original carvings.

When Granny was in Carmel she lived with my aunt,

Daisy Mason. I'm not sure if Mason was her last name at the time Granny lived with her, but one of Daisy's boys (my cousin) was named Joe Mason. It would also be interesting to hear from him. Thank you for your time, and best wishes with the continued success of the "Pine Cone."
